Questions/Comments	Here's my feedback: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. I don't see this procedure establishing any standard at all. Specifically, in this sentence "All employees are expected to wear appropriate professional attire consistent with the nature of the employee's position while working or representing the College" Without a clearly defined definition or reference to what "appropriate professional attire" consist of, the College has not established a standard. The way this procedure is worded leaves the definition of "appropriate professional attire" up to each individual supervisor to judge. My definition of this term will probably be different than other supervisors. I'd really like to see a further defining of or reference to what "appropriate professional attire" consists of within the procedure. Kurt Teal

Questions/Comments	My comments are, that the revised policy is too vague. This could lead to a multitude of opinions and definitions as to what professional attire would look like and could lead to various different leadership and employee. I understand there are some courses that would require hardy working attire. I am in the believe that some examples are needed, but in keeping with the current/today's world view of professional attire. For example, men now days only a few men are seen wearing neck ties, whereas most men no longer wear neck ties with an open collared shirt and this is acceptable. You will see some wearing more comfortable shoes and shoe retail stores have change the model of shoes with a soft sole vs the hard leather and hard soles shoes. The soft sole type of shoes (not athletic type) are better suited for standing long hours. Just my thoughts.
