Ellsworth Correctional Facility residents earn high school diplomas, certificates, associate degrees and more through Barton Community College

Ellsworth Correctional Facility (ECF) resident Tyler Armstrong has been incarcerated for nearly five years. Like most at the facility, he will eventually be released back into society. Armstrong's release date is in June of 2024.

When that date comes, the difference between Armstrong successfully assimilating as a productive member of society or winding up incarcerated again, a well-researched cycle known as recidivism, could be the education he pursued through Barton Community College while behind bars.

ECF resident Richard Johnson poses before the learning celebration Wednesday in the library at the ECF Spiritual Life Center. Johnson, who began his sentence in 1993 and will release in 2036, earned a high school diploma through a program offered by Barton Community College.

Barton Community College employees will receive at least 8% in pay raises for the next year, based on an operational budget approved Tuesday by the Board of Trustees. The board also approved publishing a budget that requires the same amount of tax dollars collected last year.

Vice President of Administration Mark Dean said the published budget estimates the tax rate will be 30.951 mills, a drop of 2.142 mills from last year. That is the Revenue Neutral Rate (RNR), which means the revenue raised will be virtually the same as last year.

The mill levy will be lower because the county clerk's office has estimated that valuations will increase.
